Course Description

PGM depicts the development of management thinking over the past 120 years, from the three distinct earlier schools to contemporary management. The last includes earlier concepts that have been carried forward and elaborated on in recent times. It also features the most significant pathfinders, thinkers and practitioners whose ideas continue to shape management today. Models and definitions of management keep evolving. As societal values change, existing viewpoints alter and new models of management emerge. However, the basic principles that underlie these different models do not lose their value. It is to examine and analyze these sound, everlasting principles that this course has been designed.

WHO MUST ATTEND?

The course has been designed for both new and seasoned managers.
